Opinions from third parties

All information that you may find on various pages on www.greaterthan.eu originating from third parties is the sole responsibility of third parties and consequently also has third parties' full rights to their material. This applies to images as well as text and other types of media that you can find on these pages. This clearly means that we as the owners of the website www.greaterthan.eu cannot be held responsible for third party opinions, wordings, and statements. We do not censor, but leave all comments as they were written originally, with the original author's own opinions, spelling errors and other potential oddities.

Unnecessary information

Should you (the reader) by any event identify information or material on this website that does not belong here, for example directly incorrect information, misleading information, false information, and other unintentional errors that are contrary to Swedish publishing practice, we hereby ask you to contact immediately us via e-mail or via the link at the bottom of each page. We can then take appropriate measures to fix the problem as soon as possible.

Intellectual property rights

All intellectual property rights in the content on www.greaterthan.eu belong to GT and / or its licensors. Copying, distribution and other use of the content on www.greaterthan.eu is prohibited without GT's written consent, except in those cases protected by mandatory law (for example the right to quote), unless otherwise stated for specific content.
